Course Analysis for NUMN28 Numerical simulations of flow problems, term VT2/22

Course Information

Lecturer: Philipp Birken

Teaching assistants: -

Number of students: 3

3 newly registered and 0 re-registered.

3 students answered the course evaluation.

Examination

Project: 1 students passed.

Oral examination: 1 students passed.

Final grades:

In all, 1 students, including 0 re-registered students, have got their final grade.

0 passed with distinction.

1 passed.

Course Evaluation

Summary of student's answers:

In addition to three students from the master program, there were 3 PhD students in the course. Of these six, three filled out the questionnaire, but I did not include a question about their background.

Of the three who answered, it seems that one student was dissatisfied with the course and the learning outcome, whereas the other two were satisfied. One student invested only 8 hour per week into the course, which is not enough for a satisfactory outcome.

One student gave the following statement about the course:

“The fact that about half way through the topic completely shifted was a bit strange as it felt more like two courses than one, and it meant that the second half felt a lot more rushed. Furthermore the second lecture about the Navier Stokes equation felt a bit out of place as we covered this complex case and then throughout the rest of the course we only consider simple cases and never really tied back to the complex case. Also the assignments on dune did not really introduce how to use dune just telling us to use it.”

Teachers' comments:

The course had

- 2 Lectures per week

- 5 Weekly assignments and one final project

The assignments were corrected to give the students feedback. Student handins of the assignments was lackluster. Talking with the students, it became clear that most did not invest the necessary amount of time in the course. This was due to various reasons, such as Lundakarneval, a too high course load and private life.

The final project was mandatory, and then there was an oral exam based on this.

Changes from the previous course realisation:

The course was given for the first time in this form. It was created from two previous courses

Suggestions for the next course realisation:

I agree with the student statement cited above. In the next realization, I will cut a bit of content from the first half and extend the second half. I will also adjust the assignments so that the students work with more complex flow problems. We might add a separate lecture on DUNE.

What did you appreciate most with the course?

What did you appreciate most with the course?

The lectures were very clear and good to understand

I really liked the final project. It was nice to see and to write a fully functional implicit FVM method with my own non linear solver.

What do you think should be improved?

What do you think should be improved?

The corrections in the assignments were sometimes very brief

The fact that about half way through the topic completely shifted was a bit strange as it felt more like two courses than one, and it meant that the second half felt a lot more rushed. Furthermore the second lecture about the Navier Stokes equation felt a bit out of place as we covered this complex case and then throughout the rest of the course we only consider simple cases and never really tied back to the complex case.
